The sign that accompanies Pamaradà is born from the meeting of different landscapes. It does not depict a specific place, but an imaginary geography built from memories, lands and stories.

At first glance, the outlines of hills, imaginary vineyards and horizons typical of the Italian countryside emerge.

Looking more closely, limestone walls, stone quarries, cultivated fields and land shaped by human work appear.

Deeper still, the landscape dissolves into a succession of layers: sediments, mineral fractures, limestone deposits, marls and clays that hold, pressed together, the time of the earth.

And so, just as the roots of the vine cross the subsoil in search of nourishment, this design too makes a journey back to its origin.

Every shape and every colour refers to a material, a memory, a transformation.

Green tells of vegetation and vineyards. The tones of stone evoke limestone and rock. The shades of ochre and copper recall the earth, wine and human work.

The result is a layered landscape that can be read in many different ways, yet keeps a single origin: the deep bond between land, material and time.
